Our Saké classifications:

Junmai: Refers to pure rice saké, the rice used has been polished to at least 70 percent. It tends to have a rich full body with an intense, slightly acidic flavor.

Ginjo: Uses high quality rice, polished to 60%, usually presents light, fruity and complex, usually being quite fragrant. Best served chilled.

Daiginjo: Super premium sake. "Dai", meaning "Big", is the pinnacle of the brewer's art. Polished to at least 50%, their nice light, complex and flavours aromas are to be enjoyed chilled.

Tokubetsu: "Special" it's at the brewer's discretion to use a particular method to alter the flavours of their -shu, usually the milling rate is lower than required, so it maintains flavour.

Kijoshu: An elegant and luxurious sake that is created by replacing some of the water used during the fermentation with finished sake, lends a rich and lightly sweet taste to this sake.
